REDESIGN OUR CONTENT TO SUIT YOU

Finding the perfect text can be challenging. Thomson Reuters can help to produce your ideal custom course text, containing content from any of our publications, as well as your own.

Why a custom publication?

Custom books offer flexibility and value.

- Lecturers: Custom publications seamlessly blend a variety of sources to create a single, professional text which precisely supports your course content.
- Students: Custom publications contain all the content your students need, and nothing they don't, representing excellent value for money.

What can be included in a custom book?

Anything Thomson Reuters publishes!

As one of the world's largest publishers of legal content, you have a wide-range to choose from! You can select a mix of content from the following products:

- Books, both current and out of print
- Encyclopaedic content
- Journals
- Law Reports
- Firstpoint
- Subscription works

Your own content.

Your course notes, case studies or summaries, end of chapter reviews, reflective questions can be added into your custom text.

Or, speak to us about publishing your course notes as an exclusive custom book for your students.

Custom Books and eBooks offer flexibility and value and we publish in all subject areas!

REDESIGN OUR CONTENT TO SUIT YOU

How is it done?

It's simple.

1 Source Thomson Reuters content

- Ask your Account Executive for review copies of any Thomson Reuters book
- Request trial access to online content such as encyclopaedias, journals and Law Reports

2 Submit your contents list

- Pick and mix from any Thomson Reuters content
- Select entire or partial chapters, or choose individual paragraphs from different texts to create customised chapters for your book
- Add your own content within or between chapters
- Your product developer can assist you in finalising content selection and sequence, according to your specific subject outline

3 Design your cover

- Provide your product developer with ideas for cover artwork
- Select a cover from concepts developed for your specific book.

4 Review and approve your custom book

- Review typeset pages and make amendments as required
- Approve the final content and cover

5 Start teaching!

The end result?

A seamless textbook.

Thomson Reuters' custom publications are produced by the same highly experienced product development and editorial teams as our commercially-available texts, so you can expect high quality results.

Pagination, paragraph numbers, cross-references, footnotes, tables of cases and statutes, and the index will all be customised for your specific text.

Once published, you will receive:

- As many free desk copies as you need for the faculty to teach the course, and a set of working files to facilitate ongoing improvement of the text
- An ISBN for you to pass onto your campus bookshop for ordering
- eBook on Thomson Reuters ProView™, if required

Thomson Reuters ProView™ is our FREE professional grade eReader platform giving you access to content in class, at home and on-the-go.

Here's what others have to say...

"I was most impressed with the services provided by Thomson Reuters staff in developing a custom book for law. The staff were sensitive to my needs, professional, and regularly kept me informed of developments. The book was finished and delivered in a professional and timely manner."

Alperhan Babacan
Swinburne University

"I chose the content for the text from a wide range of existing publications. I also wrote a chapter and adapted existing content to fit the course...The publication was delivered on time and to the specifications I needed...it looks and feels like a cohesive publication, you can't tell it comes from a variety of sources."

Dr Hugh McDermott
Charles Sturt University
